

Harding-Progressive Fight May Be Serious, Declare Democrats

National Committee Predicts Row Equal to One Which Wrecked Taft's Administration.

SAYS NEW CONGRESS WILL BUCK HARDING

Harding Due for Repudiation If He Essays to Present Legislators With Program.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER,
United News Staff Correspondent.
Washington, April 8.—Democrats are watching with unconcealed glee the signs of division between President Harding and the progressive wing of the party and they are now predicting that he will soon be in a predicament as serious as the one Taft encountered in 1912.

The president comes back from his southern vacation trip with an extremely uncertain political situation on his hands. That the president and his followers are keenly aware of their difficult situation is evidenced by the appeal against blocs made by Harding in a speech at Augusta just before he started north and in a similar plea by Senator Jones, of Washington, a middle-of-the-road progressive.

On the one hand there are the conservative republicans who want to ride along as smoothly as possible. On the other hand are the belligerent progressives, eager to try out their new strength by revamping railroad and tax legislation on a sweeping scale. The sudden fanning up of interest in the league of nations had made Harding's position more difficult. Enemies of the league are bitterly opposed to having anything to do even with its judicial offspring.

Prefers Easy Path.
Harding is seeking to minimize his troubles by avoiding international questions. Though ready to take the offensive against the league of nations again, should that question be forced, he frankly would prefer to glide along in the same way he has for the last two years, joining the international court perhaps, but saying little about anything else which might arouse the irreconcilables to wrath.

Yet Harding will have stormy sailing in domestic waters. Senator Capper, chairman of the senate farm bloc, is now on his way to Kansas. He will speak in every county in the state. His two chief subjects will be the international court and a sharp reduction in railroad rates, coupled with a repeal of the rate-making guarantee provisions of the Cummins-Esch act. The latter question is one which is agitating farming districts. La Follette, Brookhart and their associates will go much farther than Capper. Representative Fearr, of Wisconsin, recently announced a sweeping scheme of tax reform which would throw a heavier burden on those who receive big incomes. It will have the support of a group which holds the balance between the party regulars in both houses of congress.

His Hands Full.
Thus Harding will be wrestling with the progressive on domestic problems, and at the same time he will be busy on the other hand keeping the remainder of his forces behind his international court project. He will be vigorously assailed by Hiram Johnson. Doubtful senators like Borah and McCormack may, however, be lobbied into line with the administration. Lodge has been classed as doubtful but he may be counted upon to follow the president and Hughes in this instance.

The president's real troubles will begin when he starts on his western speaking trip which will be immediately after the Shriner's convention here early in June. Until then he will be too busy at his desk to do much talking. But once on the stump, he will be a target for attack, especially if he

HOME POLITICIANS ARE CHIEF WORRY OF MIDDLE WEST

Average Man in Illinois Views Adjournment of Congress as Greatest Recent Blessing.

LEAGUE IS REGARDED AS CLOSED INCIDENT

Farmer and Railroads Learning to Understand Each Other—Scotching Radical Misrepresentation.

BY LOUIS SEIBOLD.
(Copyright, 1923, for The Constitution.)

Chicago, April 8.—(Special).—The man in the Chicago street and his fellowman who toils on the Illinois farm seems to have settled down to a pre-war routine, quite willing to forget the troubles that came in between.

If the opinion of experts in various lines is of any value, business is "spotty," but much better than any previous period since the restoration of peace conditions—in this country. It might be better and certainly could be worse, meaning business, of course. The average Illinois citizen concurs in the widespread belief that if the politicians will stop talking of "elimination of ghosts and give old Mother Nature and Old Man Supply and Demand half a chance he will be able to pay his share of the war debt, help Europe by showing her how to help herself, put a little money aside for a rainy day and enjoy a reasonable amount of content.

Fears Home Politics.
The average Illinois citizen is not nearly so afraid of the effects of economic and political turmoil in Europe as he is of political irritations at home. The short month since congress adjourned and provided a breathing spell has done more to stabilize business and social conditions in and around the metropolis of the middle west than any other development since the armistice.

Necessary readjustments affecting the packing industry whose ramifications directly affect most of the rural citizens between the Rockies and the Alleghenies have only temporarily retarded in the Chicago district the business boom that is helping the east to forget its war-time troubles. Over-expansion, possibly bad management, are responsible for the consequences which to date have given the bankers more concern than it has caused to the farmer and industrial.

Business generally is pronounced "good and getting better" by the bankers and manufacturers who train a vigilant eye on agriculture and wholesale and retail mercantile conditions. There is dissatisfaction over the tax situation and probably always will be. The farmer expresses concern over weather conditions which make uncertain his crops and because of freight rates which he regards as excessive and knows eat up his profits.

Hopeful But Dubious.
He is hopeful but dubious as to the value of the legislation framed by the last congress to relieve the most acute of his vexations. Past experience has convinced him that such ventures usually turn out to be more

Harding Party Back in Capital After Vacation

President Has Luncheon and Then Puts in Two Hours in Office.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, April 8.—President and Mrs. Harding returned to Washington today from their five weeks' southern vacation. The presidential party arrived shortly after noon and went directly to the white house.

The trip from Augusta, Ga., where the presidential party spent last week, was made without incident. Mrs. Harding, it was said, was only slightly fatigued by the 16-hour train ride, indicating the gain in strength resulting from the five weeks spent in the south. The improvement in her health was further shown by the fact that she walked to the automobile at the station entrance whereas on starting the trip the automobile was driven into the railroad yards directly to the steps of the president's private car.

Mr. Harding soon after luncheon visited his office and spent two hours there, looking over accumulated mail and arranging to resume work in earnest tomorrow morning. While at the executive offices Secretary Weeks called to welcome the president back and the two talked for several minutes.

Will Rush Work.
A number of the matters of importance will receive the attention of the chief executive during the coming weeks and the president is described as most anxious to get as many as possible if not all of them out of the way before the middle of June, the time tentatively selected for the beginning of the proposed western trip.

The president has not as yet finally decided on the western trip, having deferred his decision until after the vacation trip on account of Mrs. Harding's health. While Mrs. Harding stood the southern trip exceedingly well and was in fact greatly benefited by it, it is recognized that a tour as that proposed to the Pacific coast and possibly to Alaska would be far more wearing.

Sugar Question Looms.
Among the matters expected to receive Mr. Harding's attention within the next week or two are the sugar-price situation, in which the tariff commission is expected to submit a preliminary report soon, and the merchant marine problem. With respect to the latter it had been expected that the shipping board would be able to present to the executive by the middle of the month the alternative proposals for disposition of the government fleet. The preparation of some of the detailed information found desirable to place in the president's hands has, however, been found to require more time than had been expected, and so that problem will not receive immediate attention except in a preliminary way.

Several appointments are soon to be announced including a number of each of the three groups composing the railroad labor board, several of the additional federal judges created by congress, and a member of the federal reserve board to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Milo D. Campbell.

Politics on Calendar.
Another matter that will engage the attention of the president, though to what extent is not as yet known, is the political situation including various side lights such as proposal advanced by the executive that the United States accept conditional membership in the international court of justice. Senatorial members of the presidential party read with interest all such without comment the announcement made by Senator Pepper, republican, Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia yesterday, that he planned to bring a resolution before the senate to put W. J. Simmons in absolute control of the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan; as he has a right to be, in fact and in law.

IMPERIAL KLUDD OF KLAN ATTACKS IMPERIAL WIZARD

Dr. Ridley Denies Charges That E. Y. Clarke and Mrs. Grow Caused Fight for Control.

CLAIMS CONSPIRACY TO INJURE CLARKE

Statement Is Read From Pulpit of Central Baptist Church at Sunday Night Service.

Charges by Dr. H. W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Saturday, that Edward Young Clarke, former acting imperial wizard, and Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, formerly connected with the propaganda department, were responsible for the movement to restore Colonel W. J. Simmons, imperial emperor, to control of the order, were warmly denied Sunday night by Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, imperial kludd (national chaplain) of the Klan, who from his sickbed dictated a statement, which was read at the Central Baptist church night service by J. O. Wood, editor of The Searchlight.

The statement was in reply to one given out by Dr. Evans, following order of the court which placed affairs of the organization in charge of a commission of three, composed of Evans, Simmons and Marshall J. M. George, of the municipal court.

In it Dr. Evans defended his administration, denied Simmons' charges of wanton waste of money, and asserted that Clarke and Mrs. Grow had planned a revolution in the organization in an effort to regain control of the propaganda department and the income the office brings.

Ridley Scores Evans.
Dr. Ridley, in his statement, attacked the personal and professional record of Dr. Evans and declared that after his election as imperial wizard, Evans went to Mrs. Grow, embraced her, and "baptized her with his tears of gratitude for contribution to his advancement and elevation in life."

Asserting his warm friendship for Clarke and Mrs. Grow, the minister asserted that they had been in no way connected with the fight against Evans for control of Klan affairs.

He said that Evans owed Clarke an immense debt of gratitude for his part in the election of the imperial wizard, adding "there is no darker page of perfidy in the record of human relations than the conspiracy of H. W. Evans to crush E. Y. Clarke and to drive him out of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and make him an exile and a wanderer on the face of the earth."

Dr. Ridley's Statement.
Dr. Ridley's statement follows: "From a sick bed I am dictating a denial and a repudiation of the statement of H. W. Evans that E. Y. Clarke, or Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, are in any way, either nearly or remotely, connected with the movement to put W. J. Simmons in absolute control of the affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan; as he has a right to be, in fact and in law."

The statement of H. W. Evans is a gratuitous filing at E. Y. Clarke and Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow and is a

U. S. Must Lead Way to World Peace---Bryan

Commoner Suggests Arbitral Machine to Iron Out World Difficulties.

Miami, Fla., April 8.—William Jennings Bryan addressed an appeal for world peace to an audience of several thousand persons here this afternoon and declared that "the United States must lead the way." The United States, he asserted, is the only nation which can achieve a leadership toward lasting peace because no other nation has the confidence of the world.

Mr. Bryan emphasized what he termed the need for a "machine strong enough to take hold of our government and, regardless of the party, invoke the desire of a nation's millions for permanent universal peace."

"The spirit and desire for peace pervades the world," said Mr. Bryan, "but it can't express itself. For this expression it needs an all-powerful machine." He suggested that that machine be a league of nations or any league that would arbitrate and iron out arising difficulties.

"The United States is the only nation whose voice is listened to without an ulterior motive. The nations of the world need us and the United States cannot withhold her influence. Other nations must concede our disinterestedness. The voice of the United States must spread the gospel of peace to the world and the League of nations is the hope of the world for universal peace. Preparedness for war is no curative of war and we must do away with navies and armies."

"I would like to see President Harding call another conference on disarmament and inform the representatives gathered at it that the United States will further reduce not only its navy but its army—and then some, as much as any other nation of the world."

The same spirit that uses the navy on the sea in war, will use armies on land. Scrapping one's navy doesn't eliminate the danger of another war. The world now knows that there is no hope for it, without abolition of war and we cannot abolish war and prepare for it too."

Mellon Urges Slash Of Present Surtax Rates on Incomes

DAYS OF STRIFE
FOR BONAR LAW
BEGIN MONDAY

"Tranquillity" Government of Tory Regime Faces Crisis With Re-opening of Parliament.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
London, April 8.—Troublesome days are in prospect for Bonar Law's "tranquillity" government on the eve of the re-opening of parliament tomorrow. This session will not be concluded until August, with a brief rest at Whitsuntide.

Even the supporters of the government do not deny that the cabinet, with the delicate Ruhr situation hanging like the sword of Damocles over their heads, and faced at home with budget difficulties and awkward housing and agriculture problems, are in uncomfortable seats. Thus far the government has averaged a majority of 96 in the voting. To this result the national liberals contributed substantially, having given perhaps twice as much support to the cabinet as did the opposition laborites.

But the political experts aver that Premier Bonar Law's position has been weakening somewhat owing to events subsequent to the general election. Three of his cabinet appointees were defeated in bye-elections necessitated by their appointment to office, and were forced to retire, it being conceded their downfall was due to the government's failure to furnish a satisfactory plan for the solution of the housing problem, which they were forced to face on the stump.

Defeats Damaging.
From Mr. Bonar Law's point of view these defeats were particularly damaging not only because they represented severe adverse criticism of his policy, or lack of policy, but because he has limited reserves from which to draft recruits to the government. Parliamentary experts assert that the government bench is much weaker than when the ministry was first formed.

The general effect of the changes which had to be made in consequence of the defeat of these three ministers is that the die-hard element in the government has become more pronounced.

Moreover, coalition, conservatives, like Lord Birkenhead and Austen Chamberlain, have shown no signs of throwing in their lot with the present prime minister, and the confident prediction made at the elections that the former ministers would be found with the government on the reassembling of parliament after Easter has proved ill-founded. The resentment occasioned by the break-up of the coalition still rankles. The former conservative ministers in the Lloyd George cabinet are not overly hostile towards the government, but their general attitude can not be put higher than "not unfriendly."

Says High Rates Create Artificial Conditions That Tend to Hamper Business and Industry.

WILL URGE MAXIMUM
SURTAX OF 25 PER CENT.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, April 8.—Possible efforts by the treasury to have congress further cut the surtax rates on incomes were forecast tonight in a formal statement by Secretary Mellon.

The secretary asserted that March collections of income and profits taxes, aggregating $463,000,000, had fully justified his prediction that downward revision would have the effect of actually increasing rather than decreasing the federal revenue. Coupled with this statement, was a declaration by Mr. Mellon that the March collections, under such revision as has been accepted, "proved a beautiful answer to the tax problem, and shows clearly what course further revision should take."

"There is no point in maintaining high rates of taxation, which do not produce revenue," the secretary continued, "and there is no doubt that the high income tax rates which are still in effect are gradually defeating their own purpose. They create artificial conditions that tend to hamper business and industry and reduce the volume of income subject to taxation. The surtax rates, even under the revenue act of 1921 (the present law) rise as high as 50 per cent, giving a combined maximum normal and surtax of 53 per cent, and, as the treasury has pointed out in the past, these excessive rates produce such heavy pressure on the larger tax payers to reduce income subject to surtaxes that inevitably they seek every possible means of avoiding the realization of taxable income."

Rates Effective.
"The high rates sound productive, but the fact remains that year by year they are becoming increasingly ineffective and are actually operating to reduce rather than increase the government's revenue. I accordingly recommended to the last congress that the surtaxes be reduced to a maximum of 25 per cent making a maximum normal and surtax of 33 per cent and that, at the same time, various avenues of escape from the surtaxes be closed as far as possible under the law."

"Congress has already acted to close some of the gaps but for the most part the evil still remains and the only effective way to reach it is to reduce the surtaxes themselves to a more reasonable level in order to reduce the pressure for avoidance of taxable income and keep the surtaxes from becoming completely unproductive. I am confirmed in the conclusion by the March collections that if readjusted to the maximum of 25 per cent recommended by the treasury the surtaxes would better accomplish their purpose and yield at least as large and probably larger revenues than the existing rates without at the same time involving the country in the unwholesome consequences which follow from artificial conditions growing out of the present law."

Mr. Mellon reiterated previous statements that among other things the March collections indicated "markedly better business" during 1922 than in 1921. Some of the increase in general commercial activity, he said, obviously was traceable to the recovery from the post-war slump but the relief accorded by the adoption of part of the treasury's recommendations on tax revision had given a new impetus to business and had opened a generally freer flow of capital into productive enterprise.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY IN The Constitution (FACSIMILES)

MONDAY'S NOON DISPATCHES

NEW YORK.

DETAILS OF THE ATLANTIC WRECK.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Harry Jones, an Englishman, saw two survivors fighting for the possession of a pair of boots on a dead body. They finally decided by the toss of a penny which should have them.

Two Swedes deliberately chose to die with their wives and children rather than leave them and swim ashore.

Ed. Higgins, a Hampshire bricklayer, and twelve companions in the company with him, escaped by stripping off their clothes and equipping themselves through the port hole. Richard Reynolds, from Queenstown, who kept a diary during the voyage, charges that many of the crew acted very cowardly. He said that one man, who escaped through the port hole, was wedged in for several minutes, unable to move either way, but finally escaped. He, Reynolds, was lifted by the air through a port hole.

The lad, John Henry, was the only child saved. The little fellow cried out through the port hole that his father, mother and brother were all drowned and asked to be helped out. The boy was not here by his married sister yesterday, and was the observed of all observers at Castle Garden.

The little meeting between the sister and her little brother brought tears to the eyes of all spectators.

Wm. Glendell, from Devonshire, lost his wife and was then robbed.

WOMAN BURNS SELF TO DEATH

Was Believed to Have Been Murdered—Husband Tells of Suicide Attempts.

Miami, Fla., April 8.—Excited neighbors who had heard threats of quarreling urchins in the street and recalled having seen two intoxicated men pass by called out all available members of the police department early today on what appeared to be a violent murder, but which later developed to be the suicide of Mrs. Helen Josephine Syms, who burned herself to death.

A boy passing on a bicycle discovered the body of Mrs. Syms in some bushes on the lawn of her home, with flames playing about it. When the police arrived neighbors told them they had heard cries, "Don't do that, quit," and voice reply, "I'll get you yet." They told of having seen two men rush away. The police organized a hasty search and threw out a dragnet over the entire city. Later the woman's husband appeared and told of several attempts at suicide his wife had made recently and further investigation revealed an empty kerosene can in the house. She had bound herself with heavy towels, saturated them and applied a flame, evidence showed. The body was burned badly.

Mrs. Syms was 40 years old. She came to Miami with her husband last October from Wellington, Col. Her suicide was attributed to despondency because of an incurable illness.

Prohi Officers Fire on Young Women's Auto

Two Girls Tell the Greenville Officers of Attempt to Stop Them.

Greenville, S. C., April 8.—The car in which they were riding was badly shot up and Miss Rosalie Bowen and Miss Mary Gwinn, young women of Asheville, N. C., miraculously escaped death when they failed to halt as ordered to do so by a group of federal prohibition officers on the Greenville-Asheville highway about 20 miles north of here early today, according to a story told by the young women on their arrival here. After a tire was deflated by shots and the car dashed into a ditch, officers searched it, the young women said upon arrival here, and then allowed them to proceed.

Prohibition officers, it was said were waiting on the roadside near Travelers Rest in upper Greenville county for expected rum smugglers when the automobile bearing the two young women drove into sight around a curve. L. T. Queen, officer in charge of the party stepped into the road, the girls said, and attempted to flag down the on-coming car. The young women, they later told officers here, thought the group of men were highwaymen, became excited and dashed ahead.

The prohibition officers, it was said, opened fire. A tire was shot "down," one spoke pierced in a rear wheel and other shots punctured the fenders of the car.

Auto Accessory Thief Is Wounded By Owner of Car

R. A. Boston Opens Fire on Two Men Trying to Take Tire.

Somewhere in Atlanta an automobile accessory thief is nursing a pistol ball wound, which he received at 2 o'clock Sunday morning in front of the residence of R. A. Boston, 17 Vedado way, while he, with a confederate, was engaged in trying to remove a tire from a car.

Two Boston told detectives that he was awakened about 2 o'clock Sunday morning by the sound of some hammering upon his auto. He went to window and saw two white men trying to get a tire off.

He went to his dresser, obtained his pistol and shot at the men. One cried out and seemed to run with considerable effort at Mr. Boston stated.

All households have been communiqued with, but the wounded man has not shown up so far as police had been able to learn late Sunday night.

Freight Train Hits Auto Driven by W. O. Miller at Moreland Avenue Crossing.

An automobile driven by E. A. Langworthy, connected with the State Highway department, who lives at 83 Park street, was struck from the rear by an automobile at Ashby and Simpson streets Sunday. The driver of the car that struck Mr. Langworthy's auto stopped, jumped from his car, and tore off the license tag, it is charged. He then got back into the car and rode off before his identity could be learned. Witnesses, however, secured the number, and reported it to police.

Witnesses also told Officers J. M. Austin and C. F. Preston, who are investigating the accident that the unidentified driver was under influence of liquor.

Miss Laura Garner and Miss Belle Lynn, both of 11 Garnett street, were slightly injured, when an automobile in which they were riding driven by J. B. Sills, collided with a car driven by T. S. Roddy, of Austell on Mason-Turner road near the river, Sunday morning.

The women were treated at Grady hospital. County police are investigating the accident.

An inbound freight train struck an automobile driven by W. O. Miller, of Ellenwood, at the Moreland avenue crossing of the Georgia railroad Sunday night, and completely demolished the car. Miller was thrown to the ground but suffered only minor bruises and lacerations. He was treated at Grady hospital.

position is Mr. Bonar Law's health. His brief rest at Kansas enabled him to get rid of the cold which had dogged him since election and rendered him almost voiceless just before adjournment, but his friends are uneasy regarding the effect the strain of the session will have on his general health.

Reunion Hangs Fire

The liberal reunion still hangs fire. Mr. Asquith's last move in rejecting the idea of a consultative committee which would evolve a common line of action for the two liberal groups in the house of commons, and in refusing to appear on the same platform with Lloyd George, at Leeds, has disappointed the friends of the hoped-for reunion. It is suggested in some quarters that Mr. Asquith is ready for a reunion but is restrained by "domestic influences" and by a little knot of politicians who control the party organization. But there is also distrust and it is hinted that if Lloyd George became one of the leaders of the party he would range the new army with the progressive unionists, and there would be another coalition.

The philosophic members of both groups are content to await developments, convinced that reunion will come naturally from the union of the two groups which genuinely divides all the liberals from the supporters of Bonar Law. While all these movements are proceeding behind the scenes, the labor party has made a brave show in the house of commons, and, according to observers, has justified its title as the official opposition. Some sections of the labor party are inclined to be noisy, but on the whole the members have shown considerable parliamentary skill and have adopted a policy of novel soundings under the shrewd guidance of J. Ramsay MacDonald. Mr. MacDonald has difficulties, as his party is not united, but his strategy has kept his followers together and his authority has not yet been seriously challenged.

Strike Menace

This, then, is the political situation at the reopening of the parliament. The first knotty problem to be faced by the government is connection with the agricultural situation, which since the adjournment of parliament has been greatly aggravated by strikes of family laborers over wages.

Neville Chamberlain will be placed on trial with housing and rents. He has had a difficult task in handling the question, which perhaps is nearer the hearts of the people as a whole than most of the others which come up for consideration and which have cost the government so dearly already.

The statement of Stanley Baldwin, chancellor of the exchequer, on the budget will probably be made April 23. There will be a number of interesting debates during the session, including that on Philip Snowden's motion, which will turn England into a socialist state.

Lady Astor's liquor bill, which aroused such a furore when introduced in the earlier part of the session also will be taken up for detailed consideration.

beneficial to the political promoters of them than to the legitimate agricultural legates. But even the logical pessimism of the mid-western agricultural and stock raiser is gradually disappearing as the rising tide of national prosperity penetrates the curtain of gloom that has hung over the farming communities from the Ohio river to the coast since the processes of readjustment compelled deflation. With good weather, fair luck, an increasing demand for his products, the mid western farmer hopes and expects to pull through. If he doesn't he'll probably hold the Republican party responsible and there's no telling what will happen next year politically.

ers and economic authorities is the modification of the agricultural component against the railways. Competent observers say that politicians who specialize in baiting the railway and supported by radical labor groups and unclassified trouble makers generally are less popular among the farmers than they were six or seven months ago.

Challenge Falsifiers

One reason is that some of the western railways are boldly challenging the wholly inaccurate statements made on the stump by radicals who didn't care what they said if they could win a vote. Some of the railway managers say the farmer is beginning to realize that the transportation systems have suffered quite as much as the farmer from the depression that followed necessary reconstruction processes.

The opinion prevails rather generally that if economic conditions continue to improve a reduction of freight rates will come within a reasonable time and the farmer rescued from the effects of radical mendacity. On at least one point banking industry and agriculture agree. The people of the United States are in much better shape than those of any other part of the world. Comparisons therefore induce a helpful degree of optimism as long as the prevailing policy of sympathetic but detached independence of action in foreign ventures is preserved.

Financier, farmer and agricultural concurred in the belief that eventually the people of this country will strain a point to help Europe. They think this country is doing a lot in this direction by providing an object lesson that the people of politically harassed European countries cannot long afford to overlook.

League Closed Incident

Furthermore the average citizen of Illinois is apparently reconciled to the belief that this country can and should dictate the conditions under which American aid is extended.

The league of nations project is viewed as a closed incident except by those elements which unsuccessfully supported Mr. Wilson in the exciting and decisive test over it.

Republican leaders who are divided over the merits of President Harding's suggestion that this country join the international court of justice are convinced that their Democratic opponents will try to make the league of nations the paramount issue in the presidential race next year.

Wherefore, spokesman for Mr. Harding's party in the Chicago belt favor the assertion of domestic issues above international affairs. The international court idea may and probably is of deep concern to Washington statesmen and among the politicians and in the chancelleries of Europe; but the man in the street and the farmer in this section refuse to get excited about it. The main interest in it is confined to select groups of intellectuals and democratic philistines who appraise it as an interesting wedge to the league of nations.

deliberate, and malicious falsehood given to the public for the purpose of diverting the thought of the nation from the real issue. He evidently hopes to sustain himself in an untenable position by putting E. Y. Clarke in the attitude of traitor and of seeking to destroy what he could not bring.

By controlling the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow into the controversy he made an assault upon a woman who is my friend and whom I know to be absolutely free of any conceal, suggestion, or insinuation concerning this fight for control and supremacy of the Ku Klux Klan. In fact Mrs. Grow is so broken in health that she has practically taken leave of the world and all of its concerns and on Tuesday next will go into a hospital for a capital operation from which there is small hope of her ever emerging. It is my certain knowledge that Mrs. Grow has not been approached from the outside and that she has not communicated with the outside for days together except through her nurse and by and with the consent of her physician.

Identified With Clarke.
"From the beginning of this organization and through its rise and expansion into a nation power I have been intimately and actively identified with E. Y. Clarke. The time came when through the calculations of men who feared his power or were jealous of the exercise of that power, he has broken in health, dispossessed of the position that he had earned in this organization and driven away from the association, the fellowship, and the confidence of his friends. From the day that he became the hunted of his denouncers down to the present hour he has not been in communication with any men connected with this movement to restore the government of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to William J. Simmons.

"When Prometheus was chained to the Tarpeian rocks and the thunderbolts were breaking about his defenseless head, it was a curious crowd that pecked at his eyes and clawed at his vitals.

"Who is this man who by intrigue and blackmail has elevated himself to the position where he claims to be the supreme head of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan? H. W. Evans is a man who grew to the meridian of life without having recorded a single success. In his profession he was unethical.

Record in Texas.
"Up to the time he became identified with the Ku Klux Klan there was nothing in his entire career to merit either the distinction or the honor of leadership in a great movement. It is true that he was identified with the Masonic fraternity in the state of Texas and he introduced into Scottish Rite Masonry what may be termed 'fraternal politics' and by his practices split and disrupted that organization in Texas.

"His political methods in the Masonic fraternity were the same as the methods which have characterized him in the Ku Klux Klan. It was a disposition of what he always terms 'poison meat.' This phrase of his means that he undertakes to exploit further and to gain his own ends by the alienation of friendships among men who have always trusted each other.

"When through an abortive attempt to put himself in control of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan he was proclaimed imperial wizard, his elevation from obscurity to such a dizzy eminence evidently for a brief period unsettled his reason. He hastily left the hall of the klonoconvocation and entered his automobile and drove with great haste to the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow and there embraced her with his tears of gratitude for contribution to his advancement and elevation in life.

"And to what end in what way had Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow contributed to this man's sudden rise to such a conspicuous position and such power? Why, Mrs. Grow had supplied him with a considerable sum of money in the day of his poverty and obscurity with which to meet the demands and necessities of life. 'Gratitude is sharper than a serpent's tooth.' Life is capable of startling dualities and transformations. But never in the history of mankind has there been a more striking example of the rapid alternations between Uriah Heep and Nero.

Turns Down Office.
"E. Y. Clarke was tendered by the imperial klonoconvocation the office of imperial wizard and there is not a man living who could have been designated to that office until it had first been offered to Clarke.

"In his big generosity—up his unbounded selfishness—when he was unanimously proclaimed the choice of the convention he, without hesitation, returned the office to the klonoconvocation and said that in keeping with his promise to the king and to the American people that he was retiring from all official connection with the organization. He stated that the klono had kept faith with him and that he had kept faith with the king and the American people. He went further and requested that the klonoconvocation which had undertaken to thrust upon him the leadership of the organization should confer that honor and distinction upon his trusted friend, H. W. Evans.

Favored Clarke's Power.

"From the time that Evans entered the office of imperial wizard down to the present time, he has feared E. Y. Clarke's power and has been so much in the hands of the king and his henchmen as to break the genius and to discredit the ability of E. Y. Clarke.

Imperial Wizard, K. K. K.

"National Chaplain."

Evans' Statement.

Following the order of the court Saturday, Dr. Evans gave out a statement in which he accused Edward Young Clarke, former acting imperial wizard, of responsibility for the fight now being waged to take control of the order out of the hands of the present administration. The imperial wizard also announced that steps were now being taken by the order preliminary to the formation of a woman's auxiliary.

"So far as I know, I have no personal enemies within the Klan," Dr. Evans said. "The present opposition to my continuing as active head of the organization has developed because I canceled a contract for propagating the order throughout the country held by Edward Young Clarke, under the terms of which he received $3 for each new member.

Dr. Evans stated that Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler Grow, who was formerly connected with the propagation department, was also one of those "behind the so-called revolution," and that both Clarke and Mrs. Grow were influenced by the desire to regain control of a big profit-making machine. He asserted that he held that these funds should be collected directly by the Klan and used for its advancement and for this reason he had cancelled the contract.

Call for Convention.

In discussing the decision to call a convention of Klansmen here to consider the formation of a woman's organization Dr. Evans declared he felt that the time had come when the women of the country should be formed into a body corporate similar to the men's organization, and that after conferring with a number of leaders of the organization, he decided to call the conference.

Declaring the allegation that he had wasted funds of the Klan was entirely untrue and absurd, Dr. Evans said: "The charge that the treasury has been looted under my administration is wholly without basis. The resources of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan have increased 50 per cent during the four months that I have been in charge and never has the Klan had as large a bank account as at the present moment. This money belongs to the Klansmen of the nation and will be used in their behalf. Our records show that the organization has never shown such numerical development as in the four months I have been in charge, and today there are more men being naturalized into the invisible empire than ever before in its history.

"Every one in the executive offices, charged with the handling of funds, is under bond, and every man handling Klan money in various parts of the country is similarly amply bonded. No money has been spent foolishly or recklessly while the affairs of the Klan were in my control, and certainly not in pleasure jaunts, as has been so maliciously charged through the newspapers.

Purpose of Chicago Trip.

"Specific allusion has been made to the expenditure of Klan money for a trip to Chicago. I went to Chicago

These are the development of purer Americanism and a finer and deeper sense of citizenship. To any enemies that we may have within, all I can say is that this organization will survive any attempt of traitors to scuttle the ship. All these will be dealt with under Klan law and in Klan spirit."

What Are You Missing?

NO one can want anything until he knows of its existence. That is why ancient folk managed to live fairly contented lives without window glass, soap, automobiles, stoves, toothbrushes, telephones and so many of the things we consider the bare necessities of life.

Advertising has done more than any one thing to make this era of ours so rich in comforts and conveniences. To advertising is directly due much of the multiplication of products and services which are now at the disposal of every one.

There is no denying the fact that advertising has ironed out the mechanics of existence. It has made life easier and more pleasant by bringing to our attention countless necessities which years ago a king's ransom could not have bought.

Folks dress better, eat better, sleep better and live better because of advertising.

R. G. CLARK'S WILL UPHELD BY COURT

Judge Rules Mental Condition of Testator at Time Will Signed Only Issue Involved.

Moultrie, Ga., April 8.—(Special.) The will of the late R. G. Clark, wealthy Moultrie bachelor, disposing of property said to be worth a quarter of a million dollars, was upheld by a jury in Colquitt superior court. Contrary to general expectations, the 12 men agreed upon a verdict in a short time, deliberating less than 30 minutes before finding in favor of the proponents of the will.

The trial of the case consumed nearly four days. The sole issue involved, Judge W. E. Thomas made clear in his charge, was the question of the mental condition of the testator at the time the instrument was signed. The proponents demurred to the second ground in the caveat filed by Henry Clark, half brother, and Mrs. Cynthia McLendon, niece of the deceased, which charged Rev. George F. Clark with exercising undue influence over the testator and were sustained by Judge Thomas.

Rev. George F. Clark, who with a sister, Mrs. J. F. Mow, in whose home R. G. Clark resided during his life time, was bequeathed the bulk of his estate, admitted that he was with his brother almost constantly from the time his condition became serious until his death. He said that he discussed the will before it was finally written and signed on October 14, 1922, but added that his brother brought the question up. He also insisted that he had no knowledge of its provisions until after the trial. He was filed for probate in the ordinary office following his brother's death.

Question of Breach. The question of a breach between R. G. Clark and his half brother, Henry P. Clark, came out prominently in the closing hours of the trial. Rev. George F. Clark was questioned at length as to the cause of the differences and attached the full responsibility for it on Henry Clark, because of what he characterized as "Henry's unreasonable demands made on R. G. Clark in connection with a business deal."

He identified three letters as having been written by Henry Clark to R. G. Clark. These letters were highly denunciatory in character and were admitted as part of the record. While discussing his intention of having the will written R. G. Clark said "You know how Henry has treated me and I don't know who would control Cynthia's," meaning Mrs. McLendon, according to statement on the stand by George Clark.

The caveators sought to establish that the disease from which he was suffering and the constant taking of narcotics to ease the pain resulting so affected the intellectual and perceptive centers of R. G. Clark's brain that he could not have had rational desire as to the disposition of his holdings at the time the will was signed.

MANY DISAPPEARANCES DISTURB SAVANNAH

Cavannah, Ga., April 8.—(Special.) Disappearances threaten to become epidemic in Savannah. Police here and elsewhere were asked to locate G. E. Smith, of Barnard street, 35 years old, who vanished Friday night, according to his wife and with whom he went to a theater, leaving her and promising to wait for her at a nearby hotel.

At the hotel she was given a note: "Well, I am gone on—George." His wife declared he had been in ill health for three years and since a recent operation had threatened to take his own life if he did not recover from the effects of the operation. He had nearly $100 on his person when he disappeared last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have two children. They came to Savannah from Orangeburg, S. C., six years ago.

HOSPITAL ATTACHES IN ATHENS QUIZZED

But No Trace of Gerald Chapman Has Yet Been Found by Officers.

Athens, Ga., April 8.—Close questioning of hospital attaches by secret service agents occupied the center of interest here today in the Gerald Chapman case. Chapman, convicted mail bandit who slid from the window of a ward on the second story of the building on Wednesday night, and who was reported as found on Friday morning in the confusion which followed a nurse's fainting, has not been located, nor has any clue to his whereabouts developed so far as could be learned.

Those questioned today, including Harry Bishop, the guard who reported the discovery and subsequent escape of Chapman from the hospital basement early Friday morning, held to their story of the episode, according to the department of justice agents.

William J. Burns, chief of the secret service, last night stated in Atlanta that he placed little credence in the story of Chapman having been in the hospital basement room. Meanwhile the search continues, and the justice department agents are continuing their investigation of the circumstances surrounding the scene.

Mrs. E. Branan Dies.

Juliette, Ga., April 8.—(Special.) Mrs. Eleanor Branan, well known Henry county woman, died this week at the age of 72 years. She is survived by her husband, B. C. Branan, three daughters, Mrs. Julia Craig and Misses Mary and Kate Branan; seven sons, John, Jim, Cloud, Charles, Remond, Robert and Roy Branan; two sisters, Mrs. Shirley Kelley and Mrs. Julia Elliott; two brothers, C. T. Elliott and Elder C. A. Elliott and many grandchildren. The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. J. Stephenson and burial was in the J. S. Elliott cemetery.

BARWICK TAKES FIRST AT BROOKS SCHOOL CONTEST

Barwick, Ga., April 8.—(Special.) Barwick won the Brooks County School meet, held at Quitman Saturday, attended by about 2,500 people. School exhibits placed in the court house were representative of the work being done in the county under County Superintendent J. J. Sizemore. Superintendent H. D. Knowles, of Quitman, delivered the welcome address, praising the popular movement in Brooks for consolidated standard high schools, and a response was made by Superintendent T. P. Kimble, of Barwick. Colonel Lee Beach delivered an educational address.

After dinner on the court house grounds, the athletic contests were held on the Quitman high school field, conducted by Professor Langley, of Quitman, and Professors Mosteller, Coover and Tomlinson, of the Brooks county school system.

Dr. Ballard, state school superintendent-elect, was a visitor to the school meet, and after the contests made a short talk at the school auditorium.

Total scores made by the different schools were as follows:

Barwick High school.....125 points
Dixie High school.....100 points
Mowen High school.....20 points
Pavo High school.....10 points
Oak Hill High school.....10 points
Sand Hill High school.....10 points
Mount Oliff High school.....5 points

SUMTER TO INCREASE ITS COTTON ACREAGE

Americus, Ga., April 8.—(Special.) More attention is being given this year by Sumter county farmers to the preparation and fertilization of their land than ever before, George O. Marshall, county farm demonstration agent says. Recently Marshall made an extensive tour of the county and he estimates there will be a slight increase in the acreage devoted to cotton. Sumter farmers will not abandon the growing of grain and raising of hogs, in Marshall's opinion, because of high cotton prices, but they will continue to produce sufficient supplies for home use, with cotton practically a surplus crop.

LORD CECIL AND COX SPEAKERS FOR LEAGUE

Britisher and Democrat Both Deliver Addresses in Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 8.—Lord Robert Cecil, British apostle of the league of nations, and James M. Cox, who carried the banner of the league before the country in the last presidential election, joined voices in behalf of the international organization here.

Lord Robert declared that "the United States soon may be the only nation in the world not a member of the league of nations. I did not come here to tell America what it should do," Cecil said, "but we in England believe the league to be the only salvation of the world. In Europe we feel that we must choose between two theories of living; one, back to the militaristic view prior to the war, the other to accept and advance the league of nations."

DARIEN STORE BURNS TO GROUND SUNDAY

Darien, Ga., April 8.—(Special.)—The store of J. G. Forbes, prominent Darien merchant, was entirely destroyed by fire early this morning.

It was a large wooden building, one of the largest in Darien. A shoe repair shop was burned, also, part of a 1-2 restaurant. A large wooden storehouse formerly occupied by D. L. Whitesides caught, but the blaze was put out. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

FOREST VANDALISM.

The senatorial committee recently appointed to inquire into and suggest a comprehensive national policy for the conservation and promotion of the growth of timber, has made the first round of its travel investigations, touching the southern pine belt at a few points. Its report upon the rapid disappearance of yellow pine, without any substitute to take its place, and the serious menace prevailing conditions present as to any future perpetual and adequate supply of this premier of all building lumber, is as depressing as it is alarming.

The yellow pine tree, created by God, is one of the south's greatest material resources; an asset as valuable, if it had been properly handled and conserved, as many of the other natural advantages that nature bestowed upon the south.

The present situation is made the more distressing by the fact that the long-leaf yellow pine is not subject, as are many other timber woods, to reforestation.

Some species of the pine can be reforested. The slash pine is one. Experiments being conducted on the campus of the state agricultural college at Athens have demonstrated its rapid growth, when properly handled, and its possibility of becoming of commercial value in fifteen or twenty years from the nursery.

But the long-leaf yellow pine, the king of all the soft building wood, cannot be reforested. Once gone, it is gone forever.

When this fact is realized—and it is not newly developed fact—one can appreciate the vast sums of money that the ruthless, almost vandalistic, system of commercializing the yellow pine by the original owners and millers and turpentine operators has not only cost the south in destroying one of its most potential natural resources, but cost the people of the nation through the growing inadequacy of its timber supply.

Less than half a century ago there were millions of acres of virgin yellow pine timber standing in the southern states. Without regard to the future, without appreciation of its real value, without scientific or even common sense methods of conservation, the bulk of these virgin timber lands were sold at from twenty-five cents to a dollar and a half an acre, and now the individual tree of merchantable dimensions is worth from fifteen to twenty dollars.

The mill operators, with equal blindness as to the value of the pine, cut the larger trees only, left the open forests of younger trees to the ravages of fire and storm, and in nearly all instances eighty per cent of the timber was thus destroyed.

Nowhere—and in many places not even to this good day—was there any constructive thought as to preserving the yellow pine, or as to so shaping its commercialization that the timber could be utilized as nature properly matured it, and without waste or abuse.

While America boasts of its modern civilization and of its advanced practices of industrial economics, the fact is outstanding that in the matter of timber conservation and control it could have taken valuable lessons from Europe.

not only be protected, but from government nurseries all areas of timber should be immediately reset to an applicable timber, and the growing grove then taken care of as one would his vineyard or fruit orchard. Hence Germany has found in her present crisis the wisdom of that restriction.

In the United States the orgy of destruction has raged without check. As a result this country today is face to face with one of its most serious economic problems in the existing shortage of building timber, the undue penalty imposed upon the builder—and, above all, the menace the situation holds as to the future.

It is the lesson of destruction against conservation; of vandalism against conservation.

THE TRAFFIC LAWS.

Law enforcement is made easy or difficult to the extent that people respect the law and co-operate in its observance.

In the new traffic regulations in Atlanta, regarded as essential in the expedition of business, and also in the protection of life and limb, the public should co-operate to the fullest with the officers.

And this to the extent that these laws may not become dead letters as have so many traffic laws; and by partial enforcement and flagrant violation become conflicting and confusing, and even more dangerous than the dangers they seek to remedy.

One of the most serious problems confronting Atlanta today, and tomorrow, is the traffic problem. Agencies are at work that will bring some relief. The expansion of the central relief district, the completion of the Spring street viaduct, thus providing another north and south through city thoroughfare, and the rapid development of community trading centers all tend to relieve congestion, but in the meantime Atlanta is growing at a greater pace than before.

From real estate records, telephone records and other dependable census sources, it is established that fully 2,000 new people are being added to the city's population monthly, while relatively few are moving away.

To contemplate this rapid net increase in citizens who must use Atlanta's streets permanently, in addition to the gradually increasing number of visitors to the city daily, whose safety on the streets is as sacred and equally guaranteed, is to impress the necessity for the people not only to observe traffic laws rigidly, but to help the officers in their enforcement.

NATIONAL ROAD MEETING.

A national good roads conference, bringing together representatives of various highway associations, federal and state road officials, and delegates appointed by the governors of various states, will meet in Greenville, S. C., April 16, and continue for three days.

In conjunction there will be a national road show which will be of keen interest and benefit to all good road enthusiasts, and particularly to all road builders.

This conference is to be held under the joint auspices of the Bankhead National Highway association and the United States Good Roads association.

To illustrate the interest the government is taking in the matter Director Thomas H. McDonald, of the federal road bureau, has advised that engineers and experts are preparing an exhibit which will consist of a series of small models of bridges and roads, and illuminated transparencies of federal aid and forest service roads, and views of various kinds of highways under construction.

One section of this exhibit will be photographs of roads and scenes through the Cherokee and Nantahala forest reservations in Georgia, made by official photographers of the government who were among the expedition of federal and state officials conducted by The Constitution last June.

Another government exhibit of interest will be one entitled "Three Windows of the Road," showing three views of the services that highways give to rural communities and to cities. This will constitute the centerpiece of the government's section of the good roads show.

Various states will have exhibits illustrating their own highway activities, and North Carolina's exhibit will be of peculiar interest because that state is not only leading the states of the south in highway development, but its program, begun three years ago and into which, from state and federal funds, already $100,000,000 has been invested, is generally regarded as the most ambitious state program by any state in the union except California.

That it has been, and is, a paying investment is obvious to any one who looks into the matter.

Georgia will be well represented at the Greenville conference. Scores of delegates have been appointed by Governor Hardwick, and the activities of Mrs. Albert Thornton, Sr., of Atlanta, who is chairman of the woman's division of the Bankhead association, and one of the most active and progressive workers for highway development in the south, gives Georgia a peculiar interest in this conference.

Just From Georgia

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

We'll get there. I bet you'll get there—though skies may be gray—To the good time that's coming to all, dear, some day! And I know that, for all of the desolate years, We'll have a bright rainbow to shine through our tears.

I bet you'll get there—the stars may fall dead, But life to the beauty of dawn will follow the dawn.

To the beautiful hills that look over the dawn I bet you'll get there—press on! O press on!

The Old Love Songs.

The old-time love-romances come out of scrapbooks every little while, and the world takes them to its heart again, as ever. Take, for instance, this by Joan Ingelow—"Like a Laverock in the Lift."

"It's we two, it's we two, it's we two for aye, And the world, and we two, and heaven be our stay; Like a laverock in the lift, sing, O bonny bride!

"What's the world, my lass, my love what can it do? I am thine and thou art mine; life is sweet and new. If the world have missed the mark, let it stand by; For we two have gotten leave, and once more we'll try."

"Like a laverock in the lift, sing, O bonny bride! It's we two, it's we two, happy side by side. Take a kiss from me, thy man; now the song begins: All is in the world for us, and the brave heart wins."

"When the darker days come, and no sun will shine, Thou shalt dry my tears, lass, and I'll dry thine. It's we two, it's we two, while the world's away, Sitting by golden sheaves on our wedding day."

Not Even Weather Prophets Now.

"The ranks of the good old men who were their beards long are growing smaller each year," says The Excelsior Springs Call. "Also the good old fellows who were the billy-goats, beard and the one with the beard under his chin. They are growing fewer, too, and seldom pass The Call office any more."

The Editor of The Osborne Enterprise says: "We have no comment on the weather conditions of the past week, other than to mention that it would have been worse if it could have been possible."

News of the Settlement.

Sam Woodcock has planted a potato patch. He says he has found out that a mail carrier has his choice of two things: either he works or starves.—Garfield, Correspondent of The Rogers Democrat.

Rosecoe Preston did not stay on his new job down in Louisiana as long as he stayed in the army, for when mosquitoes were so big down there they had ceased to sing and gone to braving.—Dickens Banner.

Two highway bonanzas were supposed to have gone to St. Louis, was seen Saturday going up the road with a smile on his face like a mule eating brains. What news was so pleasant.—Ten Mile, Correspondent of The Benton Courier.

Commissioner Nelson Answers Rev. Small.

Editor Constitution: You kindly allowed me to answer Rev. S. W. Small's article, which appeared in the constitution of the United States does not guarantee religious freedom. In my reply, I quoted from the first amendment of the constitution, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

I stated that Dr. James Preston Campbell, the distinguished president of the southern Baptist convention, with its more than 3,000,000 members, had at the annual meeting of this convention, asserted that the second amendment of the constitution was violated by the government during the world war, when all Protestant preachers were banished from the army camps, but Catholics were left in full control. Dr. Campbell urged his hearers "to keep on asserting the true doctrine of religious freedom is enshrined afresh in the American mind."

I also alluded to the origin of the first amendment, quoting from Dr. George Motz, who said: "The People Called Baptists," which affirms "the first amendment to the constitution of the United States, guaranteeing freedom of speech, freedom of religion and the right to petition, was adopted largely through the action of the Baptists. They took the initiative in a letter to President Washington and a month later Madison, with Washington's approval, presented the amendment."

A writer who has all respect and who is otherwise learned, also, answered Mr. Small's article, agreeing with him that "the United States constitution makes no statement regarding religious freedom."

The constitution of the United States before me as I write, in a volume by Sydney George Fisher, on page 15, gives the first amendment to that constitution. It reads:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech; or the right of the people peacefully to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

How then can these writers make the statement that the United States constitution does not mention religion? Are not all the amendments a part of the constitution?

Mr. Small is a valiant champion of protection of the 18th amendment. Where do the prohibitionists agree that the right to punish violators of this amendment? It is not a part of the United States constitution?

I had supposed that the first amendment was better known than most of the amendments of the United States constitution, so often has it been quoted as a prelude history of an American civilization. The fact that well-educated writers seem to be ignorant of the great safeguard of religious freedom, certainly proves the urgent need of our public schools teaching our great constitution. There are vast multitudes of ecclesiastical organizations in our country who deny the "right of every citizen to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience," and who boldly proclaim that religious freedom will end when they control. Let us then make our constitutional rights widely known.

Let the patriotic state superintendent of public schools, will soon issue a pamphlet on the constitution of the United States. May it be widely read.

MRS. J. O'KEEFE NELSON, City School Commissioner.

Just In Passing!

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMAN

The press and public seem to be accepting with much favor the announcement that Harry E. Harman, of Atlanta, will shortly begin the publication of the Southern Literary Magazine as a standard monthly.

It is indeed information of wide importance, for while the south has been a graveyard for "magazines," some of them ably edited and strongly backed financially to begin with, the fact is outstanding that Harry Harman never made a failure of anything in his life.

And he has the publishing experience, the personal literary ability, the money, to make this, the most courageous, and, from reports, the most ambitious of all of his long list of publications, a success from the beginning.

And there is an inviting field for a Southern Literary Magazine, if it will be satisfied to cruise in its home waters.

Just as the south has been foremost in the governmental history of this country from the day that the cavaliers landed at Jamestown, so has it been foremost in the literary history of this country.

That statement may startle one in its positive abruptness, but it only requires a little research and analysis to prove the truthfulness of it.

It is not made here in order to point out the peaks of one section of this great country, or the valleys of another.

This is a day of Americanism in which there is no place for sectional thought, and certainly no place for sectional glorification.

But God spare the day when we shall not be able to unfold its facts to strengthen our faith, and to help us in laying the groundwork for a great enterprise that may redound to the honor and glory of a sectionless nation.

All the great literary standard magazines, except those published as supplements to some of the larger daily and Sunday newspapers, are published in the east, mostly in New York and its vicinity, as for instance, Garden City; or in Philadelphia or Boston.

The one notable exception is "Sunset," published in San Francisco.

I maintain there is no good reason for this.

The south not only gave birth to and cradled American independence, but it gave birth to American democracy, to American industrial development, and to American literature.

And today the south is not only rich in the history and the traditions that encompass its literature of the past, but it is rich in the literature of the day and the hour; and in the latent possibilities that need but a magazine as Mr. Harman proposes to develop them into their own.

Not all of this nation's outstanding literature has been produced by professional authors or writers. It is doubtful if there have ever been more notable contributions to the literature of the world than Washington's farewell address, Jefferson's declaration of independence, Madison's constitution of the United States, Monroe's famous "doctrine" that bears his name, Lincoln's Gettysburg address, Benjamin Hill's reply to Blaine, Grady's New England speech.

And these are just a few of the tall timbers in a limitless southern forest.

Before the days of the Puritan, Captain John Smith in his diary of the daily routine, the adventures, the tragedies, the romances, of his faithful band of Jamestown colonists, set a standard for American literature in Tidewater Virginia that has kept the pace through the generations that have followed.

Turning back the pages of immortal verse we find Edgar Allan Poe in the hall of fame; Sidney Lanier and Henry Timrod immortalized in every tongue; Richard Henry Stoddard's famous lyric "My Life Is Like the Summer Rose," published in 12 languages; Francis Scott Key's "Star-Spangled Banner," the national anthem; Randall's "Maryland, My Maryland," famous alike with Theodore O'Hara's "Bivouac of the Dead," and Father Ryan's "Conquered Banner."

The stories of the mountains have never been more beautifully or interestingly told than by John Fox, Jr., and by Charles Egbert Crowsfoot and by Will Harbin.

Folklore has never been written with greater appeal met with deeper appreciation than the immortal stories of Thomas Nelson Page and Joel Chandler Harris.

The premier short story writer of the world is recognized to have been O. Henry.

The strongest and most powerful fiction writers of recent generations were James Lane Allen, John Estlin Cook, Francis Hopkinson Smith, Katharine Ward, Amelia Rives.

Few historians of recent years have compared with Wilson and Watson and Knight.

And today, when we think that a universe is quickened by the writings in verse of Stanton and Harman and Whitehead; by the short stories of an Edwards and a Cobb; by the fiction of a Corra Harris—

And there are scores of other southern authors of today of note whom I do not know, and whom I cannot mention for lack of space—

However—

When we think of the south's place in literature—in history, and in the quickened activities of this hour of usefulness—no one can doubt that the south has a place for a magazine devoted to its interest and exploitation.

Just a word about Frank L. Stanton—

On my first trip to Paris a few years ago I pulled into the big underground Central station from Nice a 6 o'clock in the morning.

It was raining, dark, forbidding.

I could only speak idiomatic French and but little of that, and I couldn't make even a taxi driver understand that I wanted to go to the Continental hotel.

I had been crowded in a compartment car in an all-night ride, a berth being unavailable, and my feelings were pretty closely linked up with the weather.

I stepped into a coffee booth, dragged myself on top of one of the five stools and picked up a copy of the Figaro that had been left on the counter by some day-break coffee fiend.

There on the front page was a poem in French, but under it was the familiar line "Frank L. Stanton in The Atlanta Constitution."

I never have known what it was about and don't care; but it gave me a new lease on life; and coffee finished, I succeeded in pounding "Continental Hotel" into a caddy, and all went well.

Some year or two subsequently I was at Saskatoon in Saskatchewan, and turning to the editorial page of the Dominion Courier the very day I struck that ice-bound city of the far north, I found a poem "By Frank L. Stanton in The Atlanta Constitution."

In 1919 I was traveling through Old Mexico during the famous Obregon campaign for the presidency to succeed Carranza, who was subsequently assassinated.

In the beautiful little college city of Saltillo, at the Inturbid hotel, I received a week's accumulation of mail, having been detained by an automobile tour of southern Chihuahua.

There were in the bundle a half-dozen copies of The Atlanta Constitution.

I ran through them and left them on the crude writing table in one corner of the little lobby.

That evening the professor of literature in the girls' college in that city, and the only one I think in northern Mexico, called on me and in perfect English inquired if I could talk in Spanish even in private.

He said his classes were studying the outstanding contemporary American poets, and Frank L. Stanton's words were the study for the following day. He wanted to accord to me the great honor of lecturing to the class on "Stanton."

Of course I didn't. I couldn't.

The point is this—

Frank Stanton, call him columnist or journal writer or what not, is, and has been for years, the most extensive quoted of all the American poets of this day, and is known and read in every civilized country.

And now, as Mr. Harman's proposed magazine—

I believe it will open the door to new literary opportunities in the south.

Whatever this publisher does he does well.

Some of the most artistic number of trade publications ever issued in America were edited and assembled by him.

I recall especially beautiful numbers of "Cotton." "The Southern Tobacco Journal," and others of his publications that attracted nationwide attention.

The south may expect something notable from him in this new venture. And there is undoubtedly a field for it.

Methodist Minister Discusses Protest Against Fallacy

Editor Constitution:

Sunday, March 25, appeared an article entitled "Things New and Old About the Bible"—a futile fight against the facts. By W. P. King, editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, Gainesville, Ga.

The article is a criticism of the series of pamphlets entitled "The Fundamentals," and defends the attitude of the higher criticism toward the Bible.

Believing that the more part of the readers of The Constitution, as well as those who read the Wesleyan Advocate, do not indorse the views contained in this article, I ask to be heard on the other side.

The editor of the Advocate disparages the scholarship of the men who contributed to the series, saying "A glance at the contents is sufficient to prove the hopelessness of the undertaking. Men of the meager scholarship and literary ideas of the Bible of Dr. J. M. Gray, R. A. Torrey, L. W. Posthumus cannot away with the religious thought at present, much less the future."

Now, the Wesleyan editor, as he states, must have only glanced at the names of the writers of the articles in the series. Why does he say that? Torrey, Posthumus, and Gray were men of pronounced scholarship who contributed to the series particularly on the higher criticism? The writer possesses the series classified and found in four volumes. The articles of the first volume deal with different phases of the higher criticism. Neither Gray, Torrey nor Posthumus has written a single article in this volume. Who are some of the men the editor failed to name? There are a number of names in the series on the higher criticism. All are scholars of outstanding ability and reputation. First, the history of the higher criticism, by Canon Dymon Hodge, M. A., Wyndcliffe College, Toronto. Second, "The Modernist Movement," by Professor George Fredrick Wright, D. D., L. L. D., Oberlin College, Ohio. Third, "The Bible and Modern Criticism," by F. B. Fetter, D. D., professor emeritus, Stuttgart, Germany. Fourth, "The Holy Scriptures and Modern Science," by Professor James Orr, D. D., Glasgow, Scotland. Fifth, "Christ and Criticism," by Sir Robert Anderson, K. C. B., L. L. D., distinguished lawyer, London, England. Sixth, "The Bible and the Modernist Movement," by Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, graduate of Oxford. Seventh, "Early Narratives of Genesis," by James Orr, Glasgow, Scotland. Eighth, "An Israel," by George Wright, M. A., County Cork, Ireland. Tenth, "The Bible and the Modernist Movement," by M. G. Kyle, D. D., L. L. D., Egyptologist, consulting editor of the records of the past, Washington, D. C.

An Arsenal Against Fallacies.

These articles by these scholars constitute an arsenal and pangloss against fallacies, the hypothesis and therefore unscientific methods of the higher criticism.

But there is a patent conceit among the disciples of this unscientific method, the scholars of the higher criticism, who in the time of St. Paul's missionary journey to the island of Malta, he had the following observation: "Many of us will wait until some German scholar has translated the conclusions of the higher criticism into English. In order for any man to be recognized as a scholar, he must be an acolyte, an echo man, purveyor of the lumber theology manufactured by the vivisection and mutilation across the Babelian tower of the scholars of the unproven hypothesis. Professor Dymon Hodge, in his fair and able article in "The Fundamentals," says: "Hengstenberg of Berlin was as profound a scholar as Eichhorn, Tregner or DeWette, and yet Professor Wright, who has of late overturned the 'assured and settled results' of the higher criticism from its foundation, is, according to Orr, the leading Orientalist in Germany and a man of enormous learning—that is, that is no trace of progress or reason given. He must take and be content with the writer's assertion that 'scholarship is agreed.' This conceited modern Babel worship, boasting of the scientific, historic method, was agreed upon by the scholars of the higher criticism, that the writing was not known in Moses' time. The discovery of the Rosetta stone was the key to further discoveries that forced the critics to abandon their sure position as unfounded in fact and unscientific."

Higher Criticism Unscientific.

Robert Dick Wilson, of Princeton university, is one of the greatest living scholars, master of twenty-four languages, has shown his higher criticism to be unscientific. Standing on the platform in Chicago a year ago, he challenged any man on earth to make an attack on the historicity of the Old Testament, that he could not cross-examine him on his evidence.

He was the Moody, Torrey, and Munhall and others have been and are active in mobilizing the forces for defensive and offensive warfare by bringing to the attention of the masses for whom the Bible was written the nature of the higher criticism, and what the German founders and apostles through their agents in England and America. This is why these men are singled out and ridiculed. When things are finally weighed in the balance at the Bazaar of Christ, I am persuaded that the labors of these men and others who have used their voice and pen in defense of the truth once for all, will be found to be of great value.

And as a day of rain:—

Full armor, we take umbrellas.—

The sun shines out again!

You are a changeable maiden, Who knows not her own mind; What fun is there in thwarting? The plans of human-kind! We might as well forego your aid, When Springtime's sweetest flowers For our delight you leave!

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. MINTYRE

New York, April 8.—A page from the diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Up at the cock's crow and read some observations by Francis Hackett from Europe, very fine, and then I have some pajamas, a few grave but mostly gay.

To R. Long's for breakfast and to the office. I have a letter from Alex Moore, newly appointed to be having come from California to fashion a novel and all in a noble mood and much stimulating talk.

Walked through the town and met—ing Copeland Townsend, the hotel man, did a turn in Central park with him and thence to see Lee Kugel who recently fell unconscious for nineteen days but is now on his feet.

Dined with my wife, very pretty in a new yellow frock, and later to Delmonico's to the party E. Ross gave for Alex Moore, newly appointed to be having come from California to fashion a novel and all in a noble mood and much stimulating talk.

The most fastidious man in all New York was found sauntering up Madison avenue. He was smoking a big cigar and carried with him an ash tray into which he flipped ashes after occasional puffs.

Frederick K. Detwiler, who has been a profound student of architecture by exhibiting his paintings in a gallery on Fifth avenue. It is rarely the artist rises above scholarship and the critics say Mr. Detwiler's offerings place him in the foremost ranks of American painters. I saw Count Boni and the former Anna Gould among the visitors. They are said to be the most distinguished of the galleries and rarely attend social gatherings of late.

SERMONS TO LIVE BY

BY ELAM FRANKLIN DEMPSEY

Friends, "Ye are my friends." Text, John 15:14. "Ye are my friends." One great soul explained his happiness and success by saying, "I had a friend. New Testament Christianity." The literal meaning of the word "friend" is "lover," for it bespeaks an affinity of heart. It is true that blood is thicker than water, but it is not blood that makes a friend. A friend is one who sticks closer than a brother, because kinship is accidental, while friendship is a choice. "Friendship speaks reciprocity," and Abraham Lincoln called the friend of God because he did his spiritual duty to God in trusting Him, even though his mind was wrapped

THE TEN BOOKS I HAVE ENJOYED MOST

TO FRANK L. STANTON

(Written by a former occupant of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary who found daily solace in Mr. Stanton's "Just From Georgia.")

I heard a song in Dixie land, A song of joy and cheer, Like sunshine streaming through the rain, A smile behind a tear.

The rippling music of a brook, The sighing of the breeze, As when it comes and whispers "Spring!" To all the flowers and trees.

A mother, singing to her babe, Some soothing lullaby; A thrill to stir the sleeper's heart, The lark's note in the sky.

I heard a song in Dixie land, It came to me in a dream, And so the singer's gentle art, Revived my hopes again.—J. A. R.

HOLDERBY PRAISES ABOLITION OF USE OF LASH IN STATE

Every citizen of Georgia should commend Governor Hardwick for his action in abolishing the use of the lash in the discipline of the state convicts.

Dr. A. R. Holderby, pastor of the East Park Presbyterian church, declared in his sermon Sunday morning.

"This mode of punishment has been in vogue for the past century in Georgia, and let it be said to the disgrace of our boasted Christian civilization. Such punishment is a return to the 'dark ages.' It is cruel, barbarous and savage. No Christian government should allow such punishment upon its Christian man and woman."

Mr. Holderby declared that the use of the lash was contrary to the teachings of Christ, who said, "Ye shall love your neighbor as yourself." He said that the father who inflicts cruel punishment upon his child should be consigned to the penitentiary, and a like punishment upon the teacher.

"I would be well for us to turn to the teachings of the 'old Book' and remember the precepts of the inspired apostle who said, 'we are strong though we bear the infirmities of the weak,' the minister said in closing.

MACKENZIE SEES SPREAD OF MUSIC BY USE OF RADIO

Tandy MacKenzie, the young Hawaiian tenor who sings here in concert Tuesday afternoon at the Woman's club auditorium, for the Atlanta Music club's series, is an ardent radio fan, and is especially interested in the development of music by radiography.

"To my mind," said MacKenzie, in a recent interview, "the musical number is now being generally broadcast by radio will have an enormous influence on the musical development of this country, second only perhaps to the magnetic recording done by the phonograph companies. Of all the arts, music holds the greatest promise for the masses, for it does not have to be understood to be enjoyed."

"The past year of radio instruments in the great U. S. is bound to develop thousands of new music lovers, particularly among the masses, who are amateur radio study. In their nightly receiving experiments they are bound to hear a great deal of fine music and, as they become more and more interested in the art, they will be able to play it themselves."

The program begins at 8:30 p. m., and tickets will be on sale at the door, $1.50 general admission, and $1 to students.

Appreciative Fan.

Dear Station WGM:—I enjoy your program very much and I wish to express in this small way my appreciation of them. I have a home-made set consisting of a home-made vario-coupler, a condenser and a detector, yet I hear your programs with clearness. I especially enjoy your orchestra.
Yours truly,

SUNDAY PROGRAM VERY ENJOYABLE

Variety of Musical Entertainment Broadcast by Station WGM Sunday Afternoon.

Station WGM's Sunday afternoon program from 3:30 to 4:30 o'clock was one of the most enjoyable broadcasts in many months. There was splendid variety, vocal solos and duets, and piano and violin solos, given by accomplished and widely-known artists.

The splendid arrangement was sponsored by Mrs. Ward M. Nerl, soprano, assisted by Mrs. A. C. Hay, contralto; Mrs. Norwood Key Taylor, pianist, and W. W. Leffingwell, violinist. The four artists were heard in favorite musical numbers and blended their efforts in an unusually interesting Sunday program.

Mrs. Nerl's rich and pure voice was heard in several beautiful solos and in duets with Mrs. Hay. She is a pupil of Signor Volpi and her voice gave every evidence of excellent training and an unusual beauty.

Mrs. Hay, contralto, sang in duets with Mrs. Nerl and her voice blended beautifully, the duet numbers being distinct features of the broadcast.

Mrs. Taylor is a well known Atlanta teacher of piano and a finished artist. Her accompaniments and solo numbers were outstanding and thoroughly enjoyed.

Mr. Leffingwell is a teacher of violin and one of the best known violinists in the nation. His solos on the Sunday program were wonderful and he displayed all the skill and finish of the master he is.

SEVEN ACES PLAY FOR FANS TONIGHT

Popular Constitution Orchestra Returns After Week of Engagements
in Carolina.

Warner's Seven Aces, The Constitution orchestra, arrived in the city Saturday afternoon after an absence of one week in filling engagements in Columbia, S. C., and in Asheville, N. C., and will be heard on Station WGM's 6 to 7 o'clock broadcast tonight.

The popular Atlanta orchestra returns to Atlanta after a week of the most brilliant successes ever accorded by a southern orchestra. Playing for the most exclusive clubs in two states and at many private social functions, Warner's Seven Aces have left an enviable record in the two Carolinas. Wherever they were heard, critical musical lovers loudly praised the Aces. It was a series of successes throughout from the time they left Atlanta until their return.

Admirers of the widely-known orchestra will feel a bit of pride in hearing of the unusual triumphs of the orchestra that has thrilled radio fans of the nation for many months and tonight at 6 o'clock when Byron Warner, director of the Aces, sounds his "A" and the early program begins listeners will enthusiastically cheer the return of this organization to Station WGM.

Warner's Seven Aces will be heard on the 6 to 7 o'clock broadcast from Station WGM. The Atlanta Constitution, each day during the present week.

WGM BROADCAST PRESENTED STARS

Signor E. Volpi's Advanced Voice Pupils
Heard in Beautiful
Sunday Night Program.

The quality of radio offerings from Station WGM, an outstanding characteristic of broadcasts from this station during the past several months, was strongly emphasized in the Sunday night program. The program, sponsored by Signor E. Volpi, noted Atlanta opera coach and teacher of voice, presented a group of advanced voice pupils of the well-known teacher.

The splendid 9:30 to 10:30 broadcast carried the voices of several popular Atlanta artists into the homes of thousands of listeners who regularly listen for Station WGM's radio offerings. The list of accomplished vocal stars who took turns before the microphone last night included Mrs. Irene Free, lyric soprano; Ford Williams, baritone, and Rev. Jones Tyler, baritone.

Mrs. Free's refreshing and rich soprano voice was unusually sweet in Bartlett's "A Dream," "Song of India," "Mifanwy," "At Dawning," "Because," and other widely loved numbers. This gifted young Atlanta soprano possesses a voice of rare beauty and critics have been loud in their praises of its purity and sweetness.

Ford Williams and Rev. Jones Tyler, the latter a newcomer to this station, divided honors as baritone soloists. Mr. Williams has been heard on many programs at this station and enjoys wide popularity with WGM fans. Rev. Tyler's debut was a splendid success. He possesses a voice of exceptional mellowness and depth which was heard to decided advantage in his numbers.

Signor Volpi, following his usual custom, gave the piano accompaniments for the vocal numbers by his pupils. He is best known as a teacher, although a finished pianist whose contributions to broadcasts from this station are highly enjoyable features.

WILL WRITE MESSAGE IN SKY WITH SMOKE

Noted Pilot Will Offer Unique Advertisement for
"Lucky Strike."

An entirely new aeroplane stunt will be presented to Atlantans on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, when Captain C. R. McMullin will "write with smoke" on the sky the words "Lucky Strike," at an altitude of ten thousand feet, advertising that brand of cigarettes.

The words which will be plainly visible for miles will have the appearance of having been written by hand. Captain C. R. McMullin is an experienced pilot, having served with the Royal Air Force of Great Britain during the world war.

The writing in the sky novelty was invented by Major Jack Savage, who first thought of the possibilities of "writing with smoke" while he was watching a stunt flyer one evening about twilight, when the aeroplane could hardly be seen. He tried various schemes but none seemed successful, and he soon found himself handicapped by the lack of funds. Finally he raised a small sum of money in order to proceed with his work, and in 1920 produced a trail of smoke that satisfied him.

Early in 1922, he tried out the scheme publicly and created a sensation in England, France and Belgium. Later he came to America and became connected with the American Tobacco company. Securing a number of scout planes, and experienced pilots, he began in New York, by writing the words "Lucky Strike" across the sky and even thrilled old New York and stopped and viewed the feat with wonder.

E. A. Kelley, an American pilot, has been in Atlanta several days, making preparations for the "sky-writing"

More American films are seen in Argentina than from any other country.

Two pretty, young runaway sisters from Columbus, Misses Rachael and "Billie" Simmons, ages 14 and 19 left Atlanta at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, after they were surrendered to their father by the matron at police station.

Ralph C. Proctor, 20-year-old Atlanta dentist, who was taken in custody with the girls Saturday night, was released by local police for want of prosecution, when it was shown Columbus authorities that he was not instrumental in persuading the girls to leave home.

Rachael said that she had planned the trip leaving home in order to keep from going to school. Her sister

Cotton Makes Net Gains During Week's Trading

New Orleans, La., April 8.—The trend was higher in the cotton market last week and closing prices showed net gains of 47 to 134 points. At the highest the trading months were 60 to 134 points up, net, while at the lowest, early in the week, they were 10 to 38 points down, net. Fluctuations were within limits of 14 to 171 points. May, after selling down to 27.55, rose to 29.28 and finally closed at 29.17 cents a pound. In the spot department prices gained 100 points on middling, which closed at 29.50 cents a pound, against 10.63 on the close of this week last year.

One of the main supporting influences of the week was a better spot demand, both at home and abroad. Trading in Liverpool reached large proportions. Thursday's sales of 12,000 bales up the largest single day's turnover in months. Bullish sentiment in this market was stimulated by private cablegrams from Liverpool noting a demand there from Scandinavian countries, from Germany and even from Russia. In the south-

BUILDING NEW TRADE THROUGHOUT SOUTH

ELABORATED CO.

REPLACING MANY ROOFS IN SOUTH

With its home office in Pittsburgh, Penn., but with well established branches in this city, Houston, Texas, and Chicago, the Eskimo Syrup company finds itself building up a large list of patrons all over the country.

Eskimo syrup was first introduced to the buying public as Eskimo Pop, and its branch in Atlanta was established about one year ago. The president of the company is W. P. Miller. The general sales manager is Edward McGonigal, who has been established in Atlanta since last November. The branch manager of the Atlanta house is J. A. McGonigal, and since opening up the Atlanta territory the Eskimo Syrup company has made wonderful progress.

The company has just recently opened branches in Boston, Denver and Los Angeles, and are at present opening campaigns in Birmingham, Columbia, S. C., Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Asheville and Raleigh, N. C. There are now in process of opening branches in Cuba and South America.

Probably no drink of its kind has shown greater activity in the past year than has Eskimo syrup. Over 600 active bottlers have taken on this popular syrup during the past year and it is declared that it is making bigger strides than any other drink which has been on the market so short a time. Eskimo syrup is regarded as among the leading chocolate-flavored drinks in the country and in competition with all other drinks is the second largest selling bottled drink.

Under the charge of the Atlanta branch are very optimistic over the future and believe that it will be only a few years until Eskimo syrup will be the leading drink in the country, and of all popular bottled drinks.

That it pays to buy quality roofing, which is the cheapest in the long run, is amply evidenced by the large number of roofs which the Elaborated Roofing company, of this city, have been called upon within the last few months to replace with their well-known roofing.

Not only has this company been exceedingly busy covering new buildings of all kinds, but in scores of cases they have been called upon to take off roofing which was not satisfactory, and to supply some of their brands of roofings, although in many cases the roofing displaced had not been on the house more than nine months. This is a splendid tribute to the roofing material itself handled by the Elaborated Roofing company, as well as to the thorough manner in which their workmen execute their contracts.

The Elaborated Roofing company is located at 222 Palmer building, this city, and is under the management of L. E. Williams. The parent company in Chicago is one of the largest and best known roofing companies in the United States.

Mr. Williams is one of Atlanta's splendid business men who has not only established himself in the business world of Atlanta, but who has drawn around him a company of thoroughly experienced force of workmen and a competent group of salesmen who are keeping the Atlanta branch busy all the year round. It is a well-known fact that the work done by the Atlanta branch of the Elaborated Roofing company is among the very best in its line, and their experienced workmen are in position to do work unsurpassed anywhere.

The Elaborated Roofing company is represented all over the United States by 72 branch offices in the principal cities, and has to its credit more than 200,000 houses in the United States roofed by some one of its branch offices. Just now the prospects are that this number will be greatly increased this year, and that thousands more of owners of buildings will become "Elaborated" enthusiasts. Never a day passes without the estimating forces of the Elaborated Roofing company, of this city, is not busy with calculations for new contracts, and with the big building boom that seems to have so strongly pervaded the south, the company rightly expects this to be the banner year in its history.

We try to impress upon the buying public," said Mr. Williams, "that quality roofing is, after all, the most economical. The kind of roofing that we place on buildings is perhaps no greater in cost in many cases, but by reason of their durability they have stood the test of time and have given us the reputation of honest workmanship and the best of materials. In this way we have built up a splendid reputation throughout Atlanta and its southern territory, because, regardless of the cost, the owner of buildings real-estate and the good roofing put on by the Elaborated Roofing company is best in the end."

BELL'S MAYONNAISE, MADE IN ATLANTA, MAKING FRIENDS FAST

"Salad dressings today are so generally recognized for their food values that they have become a staple article of diet and appear on the simplest as well as the most elaborate menus," states an eminent authority writing in a current magazine.

"Mix and utilize raw green things of all kinds, but always with the delicious nourishing salad dressings," says another writer.

Upon seeking information from another authority, John T. Bell, at the Fulton market, 25 East Alabama street, maker of Bell's, The Original Mayonnaise and Tartar Sauce, was questioned.

Mr. Bell stated that the uses and methods of serving salad dressings were unlimited, and that frequently some of his many customers told him of some new combination they had prepared and enumerated a few new recipes in the salad line that have met with much favor, among which are the following:

Number 1.—During spring and summer the raw vegetables and greens should be used as much as possible. Two, which should be used as often as possible and with any vegetable combinations, are spinach and grated carrots. Spinach is most rich in iron and other minerals. Much of this value is lost in cooking, no matter how careful you may be. Raw, the taste is not pleasant, hence take one or two raw spinach leaves, chop very fine, and sprinkle over any and every salad you make; discussed with salad dressing they make a most palatable food.

Number 2.—Also cucumbers should never be served soaked in vinegar. It is this which makes them disagree with many people. Use a salad dressing. Number 3.—Carrot and cottage cheese salad is made of equal parts cottage cheese and ground carrots, with about one-third chopped nuts, use Mayonnaise dressing. A delicious combination.

"However," continued Mr. Bell, "remember the important part of any salad is the dressing. With Bell's you can make no mistake."

Mr. Bell makes his famous brands—Bell's, the original home-made mayonnaise, Tartar sauce, and Thousand Island dressing fresh daily at the Fulton market only. It is used and sold in bulk only. In a period of a little more than a year Mr. Bell has achieved an enviable reputation for his products and a wide and ever increasing patronage.

Yaarab Chanters Will Sing In Benefit Concert at Club

An occasion of widespread interest will be the appearance of the Yaarab Chanters in a concert at the Atlanta Women's club auditorium Monday evening, April 16, for the benefit of the Scottish Rite Crippled Children's hospital.

The fame of this group of splendid singers has been recognized in Shrine circles since its organization in 1916, and its activities have heretofore been confined, by imperial ruling, to Shrine events. The announcement, therefore, that they will make a public appearance in a program of varied selections, including ensemble numbers, classic and popular solos, duets, old-time negro melodies and special numbers for which their fame is pronounced, promises a rare treat.

This concert is occasioned by the desire of the members of the chanters, 23 in number, to lend their assistance in aiding a worthy charity.

Special permission has been granted by the imperial potentate of the whole shrine, John S. McCandless, and the entire proceeds will go toward the maintenance of the Yaarab temple's benevolence, the Scottish Rite Crippled Children's hospital.

The concert will be given under the direction of Frank Cundell, the director of the Yaarab Chanters at all times. Mr. Cundell is a singer of marked ability and is a member of the music committee of Yaarab temple which passes on the voice merit of each applicant into the chanters.

The ladies' auxiliary of the Scottish Rite Crippled Children's hospital, of which Mrs. W. T. Parkerson is president and Mrs. Bert Adams, secretary, will sponsor the performance. Admission will be $1. Reserved seats will be on sale Friday, Saturday and Monday.

Confessions of a Debutante

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY. I ran away from my fiancé, Jonathan Grey, rich and elderly, to the arms of...

INSTALLMENT NO. 73. "A RED GERANIUM." I have found Elsie. The lure of summer in the air took me out early this morning and alone...

"At one of the old houses, a brick mansion of a day gone by, I stopped the car, little knowing why, and gazed up at windows on the second floor where a red geranium blossomed."

"The brilliant bloom seemed to beckon. I found myself opening the door and stepping out of the car, going up the short flight of stone steps and entering a hallway to ascend a charming old-fashioned stair."

"At which of the doors should I knock? and for whom should I ask?" The questions came to me hazily, but my feet without my willing it went on, up, up, until I reached a light step another hall and turned to face the door of a front room.

"I lifted the knocker. And then waited what seemed an incredibly long time. Finally I heard a light step within. My heart pounded. The step came toward the door. The knob turned slowly. The door opened."

"And there stood—Elsie, my sister!" "Elsie?" I cried and she was in my arms hugging me wildly and laughing.

"How did you find me? How did you ever?" "I'm so glad!"

"The questions tumbled from her lips while she pulled me to a sort of couch and we sat down."

"The room was bare. The red geranium, blazing on the window sill, was the one friendly touch. Elsie had on a frock which I recognized as one from her winter wardrobe."

"She noted my glance at herself and about her place."

"There isn't much one can do with it, is there?" She laughed, the same may little butterfly pick. "A cough, a couple of chairs and a table are rather unbending things! They won't spread around and look comfy—but just look at my geranium and the lovely sun at my window and the colorful chintz at my neighbor's dormer!"

We laughed, a bit hysterically, it seemed to me.

"You're happy then?" I asked.

"Wonderfully so!" and the rich full tones carried the truth of her words straight to my heart.

"He's wonderful to me!" she went on. "I knew I should be happy—this way!"

And I had an impulse then to ask about him, about their marriage, his business, who he was. A thousand questions were on the verge of being, but they were stayed on my lips. I could not voice them.

And when finally I left, after taking Elsie out for lunch and watching her eat ravenously, I vowed that on the morrow I should go back with my arms laden with gifts for her.

But how frail are the promises we make—even to ourselves and in the best of faith!

Getsinger Reports Increasing Demand For American Goods

Growing demand for American products in other countries is reported by the south Atlantic district office of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce here, which is in receipt of specific requests from buyers in 27 countries, forwarded by United States commercial attaches, trade commissioners and consular officials stationed abroad.

Most of the inquiring merchants, according to B. C. Getsinger, chief of the district office, wish to purchase goods outright; others act as agents for manufacturers.

Among articles desired are portable houses, heating plants, amusement devices, staple foodstuffs, hardware, machinery, lumber, paper, textiles, automotive devices, newspaper cuts, stoves, jewelry, shoes, soft drinks, railway cars, advertising novelties, clocks and many other commodities.

"The fame of American manufacturers is winning new markets constantly," declares Mr. Getsinger, "and steadily increasing exports from the United States industries that we are entering on a period of continued prosperity that will tend to reduce the effect of depressions at home. It is gratifying to note the large number of southern manufacturers who are getting actively into the foreign field and successfully competing with other concerns through maintaining a high standard of manufacture and service.

The south is gradually coming into its own in foreign trade and the zone is not far distant when a very large percentage of our mills and factories will be kept running full time on orders from other countries."

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

A Stain Remover.
To remove stains and strong odors from knife blades, rub them with a piece of raw potato.

Peanut Brittle.
Add a pinch of salt and a few drops of vanilla to the peanut brittle and note the improvement.

Opening Clams.
Pour boiling water over the hard-shell clams and allow them to stand in it for a few minutes. The shells will then open easily.

Less Laundry.
A little butter under the spout of the cream pitcher will prevent the cream from dripping and making grease spots on the clean table cloth.

A Sauce for Spaghetti.
Plain boiled spaghetti is delicious if served with sauce of tomato, mushrooms, chopped pepper and a little onion. Garnish plentifully with grated cheese.

Plant Life.
An authority on horticulture says that plants should never be kept in a sleeping room during the night. Plants consume the fresh air and give out carbon dioxide, which is detrimental to the health of the individual using the room.

CHUCK YOUR LUNCH.
Nowadays motorists never need to eat cold lunches just because they choose to take provisions with them to eating at a country inn. There are so many ways of keeping things hot that picnics no longer suggest cold meats.

Vacuum bottles and jars are, of course, no longer novelties. However, you may not know that there are vacuum containers made wide at the mouth in which you may carry such things as fried or fried-toasted chicken, creamed potatoes, or any solid or semi-solid foods that could not have been carried in the old-fashioned narrow-necked containers.

Some automobile owners make use of fireless cookers in solving the problem of hot lunches. A small cooker is most convenient. Even in a small one it is possible to carry three different kinds of hot food. Not only do they remain hot in this way, but they cook as you go. You need only begin the meal when you start and it is cooked by the time you wish to eat.

More to the taste of some people are the oil stove kits that are to be had at stores or departments dealing with sporting goods. One of these with two burners weighs only eighteen pounds. Gasoline is the fuel used. It can be folded up to form a neat box about 5 by 10 by 18 inches. To be used with these portable stove kits are ovens. These fold up perfectly flat and can be stored away easily. In these ovens one can roast meat or make hot biscuits or simply make use of them to warm up rolls or other food before eating.

Some of the picnic boxes equipped with dishes, silver, etc., for motorists are supplied with little portable stoves. (Copyright, 1933, for The Constitution.)

Stella Holden Writes About Atlanta in Verse

Miss Stella Holden, of Athens, who is one of Georgia's poets and musicians, has written a song to Atlanta. The music and words were both written by Miss Holden. The music is tuneful and the words to which it is set are full of the spirit associated with the word Atlanta.

The verses of the song are as follows:

Towering o'er all other cities
In the splendor of the sky,
Like a queen before the nation
With a glad song for the sky.

Stands Atlanta crowned with glory
Ever beautiful and fair;
Each day twining some fresh laurel
In the glow of her hair.

Chorus.
Great is Atlanta,
Great is Atlanta,
She has reared her dream.
"Onward" is her watchword
In the way of life supreme.

Phoenix-like, she rose from ashes
To a city of old her hills,
Welcoming the world to greet her
With an answer of her hills.

Over the flames of Sherman's fire
She has risen to higher sublime,
Hymned a song for all the ages
Marching o'er the mounds of time.

And her silver trumpets thrice
To a listening world relate,
Every day her shining progress
In its pathway thru the states.

Custom never stales the story—
All its truth and all its might;
'Tis a living song of glory
Echoing to the worlds of light.

Of her deeds the world tastes knowledge.
Of her deep undented will;
She is like that mighty city
That was set up on a hill.

Onward ever is her watchword
In the way of life supreme;
She has greatly, nobly triumphed,
She has realized her dream.

MISS STELLA HOLDEN,
Of Athens, writes a poem and song to Atlanta. She is a gifted poet and musician.

Despondent Woman Attempts Suicide Sunday Afternoon

Mrs. Louise Williamson, of 80 Central place, was taken to Grady hospital Sunday afternoon suffering from an overdose of capidine, which she told doctors she took while in a despondent mood. Her condition is not regarded as dangerous by physicians.

Mrs. Williamson stated prolonged illness had caused her to become despondent.

Athens, Ga., April 8.—(Special.)—Approval of a comprehensive farm program for Clarke county together with the decision to underwrite the money that will be needed to employ a market master for the club here were the features of a special meeting of the Kiwanis club held this week.

The farm program was submitted by J. W. Flor, county agent, and includes a cow, sow, plenty of chickens, vegetables, and food stuffs for animals in the county.

BEAUTY CHATS

THE INVALUABLE LEMON.
There is little now to be said about the virtues of lemon as a beautifier. It is only hope now and then to recapitulate its uses, in case my readers may have forgotten. But there is one way of using it that few know about.

That is to make a cream entirely of lemon. For an oily skin take two or three lemons, cut them in quarters and run them through an ordinary meat mincing machine—food chopper—with the smallest blade attached. Be sure the machine is clean, scald it with hot water and soap, and let it soak in boiling hot water some time, so not a trace nor an odor of food remains. Otherwise the lemon will take it up.

Run the squashed lemon through several times until the rind and seeds have been thoroughly ground. Strain through a sieve so the larger lumps are taken out and only a soft, pulpy substance remains. This is a marvelous bleach for the hands and finger nails and for the face and neck. However, if the complexion is sensitive, it will not stand this full strength. In that case, dilute with rose water until it ceases to sting.

This makes a liquid, rather than a cream. But this first lemon liquid strained through a fine sieve (I mean the pure juice and pulp, no rose water) can be used instead of the plain rose water called for in the cold cream formula, to make a soothing, bleaching lemon cream.

One new idea for today is to take the lemon juice and pulp and add almond milk and a little glycerine. Such a combination is excellent for tanned and slightly dry skins. The proportions are not important—as much milk as juice—and one-third that amount of glycerine. But you can vary this. More milk is better for very dry complexions.

A. H. X. and Mrs. B. S. B.—An oily skin usually denotes a sluggish digestive system, or an inability of the organs of elimination to relieve such a condition. In other words, the skin is taxed unnecessarily to keep the system cleared of waste. Sometimes by drinking more water, the kidneys will take care of such a condition, but the better way is to eat less of the foods that are causing this trouble. A good test would be to eat less foods in which there is much oil, such as fatty meats or pastries, and to drink enough water to flush the system, noting all the while the effect upon the skin.

THE VITAL FLAME

BY MAY CHRISTIE
A Stirring Serial of Primitive Passions

CHAPTER XXXIV.
"I presume you've been painting Paris all the colors of the rainbow, and the leading shade was red! You're a painter by profession, aren't you?"

"Ha! Ha! Treman laughed at his own coarse jest.

"I am a sculptor," said Miles, with deadly quietness. "Paris in some minds may stand for dissipation, but to me it stands for art."

"Oh, don't get huffy, old fellow! I was merely joking." Treman did not wait, at this stage of affairs, to antagonize the man. "You artistic chaps are far too touchy. I'm a dull business fellow, and liable to tread heavily where angels' wings don't brush. However, if the complexion is sensitive, it will not stand this full strength. In that case, dilute with rose water until it ceases to sting."

This makes a liquid, rather than a cream. But this first lemon liquid strained through a fine sieve (I mean the pure juice and pulp, no rose water) can be used instead of the plain rose water called for in the cold cream formula, to make a soothing, bleaching lemon cream.

LEMON JUICE IS BLEACHING AND ASTRINGENT.

Rose Bud—There are braces that may be purchased for helping to straighten a child's legs while he is growing. Drink plenty of milk to add to your weight.

Tomorrow—Answered Letters.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Child's Hair With

If you want to keep your child's hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multifid coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonsful of Multifid in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub the Multifid in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Multifid coconut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Multifid—(adv.)

Reports Indicate Upswing Of Business Continuing

New York, April 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Although considerable irregularity was apparent in the chief financial markets during the past week, reports from industrial districts showed that the strong upswing of business is being continued.

Fig iron production is at a new high level for all time and a similar condition probably exists with regard to steel. The secondary buying movement in steel products, which started last December, and which was superimposed on one that had begun in the spring, has come to a pause. This is explained, however, by the fact that production is now extraordinarily large and that consumers are assured all the steel which their plants can handle.

Meanwhile the steel trade believes that although the rise in prices has been arrested the present rate of activity will be maintained for a number of months ahead.

More Automobiles.

That other branches of industry are operating at what amounts to capacity may be seen from the figures for automobile production for March.

Some 346,000 cars were manufactured in that month, which exceeds by 57,000 the best previous month, made in June of last year. Over twice as many cars were made in the first three months of this year than last, the total being slightly more than 807,000. Makers believe that the total for the year will be 3,000,000, but point out significantly that favorable conditions will be needed in the materials market.

Railway car loading also adds testimony to the other evidences of intense activity, continuing to set new high records for the season of the year. In this connection it has been announced by the American Railway Association, anticipating further gains in traffic and a wholly unprecedented movement of freight, the railroads have authorized the expenditure of $1,100,000,000 this year for the expansion of their rolling stock and other equipment.

This amount will supplement the expenditure of $340,000,000 for a similar purpose last year.

Approximates 1920.

Official recognition of the progress attained by the business revival is offered by the monthly review of credit and business conditions issued by the Federal Reserve Bank at New York. Referring to the existing situation, the review states, "the productive and distributing activity of the country is very near its capacity; it has almost completely exhausted its ordinary transportation facilities and in many departments of industry has caused a shortage of labor."

The review also points out that the loans and investments of all member banks throughout the country approximate the high point of 1920, despite the intervening fall in the general level of prices. Under these conditions it is considered that the reserve ratio of the federal reserve system is of little value as an indicator of credit conditions, the huge gold imports of the past two years having altered the situation greatly.

An interesting test of the speculative position was furnished during the week. Bearish traders tested the conditions in both the cotton and stock markets. Temporary reactions were forced but in both cases substantial rallies followed fairly quickly. Public participation continued to be on a restricted scale.

A slight easing in money rates was attributed to the turn of the end of the month and the gradual drawing down of the large treasury balances which were built up by the recent collections.

With appropriate ceremonies, the Elks' free clinic for the poor was formally opened Sunday afternoon and dedicated to the benevolent principles of Elksdom.

A large throng blocked West Peachtree and Fourth streets at 3 o'clock as the parade which had moved from the Elks' home on East Ellis street and marched through the downtown streets finally came to a halt before the clinic at 350 West Peachtree street to begin the ceremonies.

Exalted Ruler Judge L. F. McClelland presided over the ritualistic service. This service involved the use of beautiful floral emblems, red, white, blue and purple, symbolizing the patriotic, fraternal and benevolent principles of the order.

Following the ritual, Colonel Walter P. Andrews spoke briefly on aims and accomplishments of Elksdom, pointing out the interest which Elks have in the work of public welfare and in carrying on a comprehensive program of charitable activities of which the new clinic is to have a very prominent part.

Colonel Andrews was followed by Dr. Frank Eskridge, Atlanta surgeon who is director of the clinic. Dr. Eskridge spoke of plans for the clinic, which is to be operated entirely without red tape and with the fixed purpose of reaching every person in the city who is in vital need of expert medical attention but without funds to pay for specialists.

Miss Lillian McClelland, young daughter of the exalted ruler, raised the flag over the new institution to proclaim its dedication to public service.

Special music was rendered during the dedication by Miss Nora Allen and Thomas Dwyer, accompanied by Signor E. Volpi, and also by the Elks' band under direction of Mike Greenblatt.

Following the close of the program a large number of persons took advantage of the invitation to inspect the clinic and its equipment. These were escorted through the various departments by Dr. Eskridge, Dr. H. P. McDuffie, associate director, and other members of the clinic staff. The clinic will open its first patients on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Regular hours for free patients will be from 2:30 to 5 o'clock on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons.

That Sunday laws are un-Christian, un-American and completely out of harmony with the word of God, was the assertion of Evangelist A. S. Booth, last night at the Elks' theater.

"The kingdom of God is not a kingdom of force," he said, "if it is right to compel people to obey the law of God, the Lord would have forced Satan in the beginning to do right, and Adam and Eve at the creation of the world."

"The fourth or Sabbath command that emphatically states that the seventh day is the Sabbath and should be obeyed also says, 'six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work.' One of the days commanded to work upon is the first day of the week or Sunday. Christians who conscientiously observe the seventh day also recognize the command to work on the other six days. Now when God says work, and the state says not to work on a particular day there is conflict. Then the question is who will we obey, God or man?"

"The church needs no human protector—a church protector soon becomes a patron, then a dictator, and finally a tyrant."

"The Christian lobbyist can never do the work of the Christian prophet. He is inspired from beneath, and the other from above."

"There should be no supremacy of church over state or of state over church. Each should function absolutely independent of the other."

"Daniel's Striking Prophecy, Chapter Eight and Nine," will be Mr. Booth's theme tonight at Cable hall, 82 North Broad street.

Rome, April 8.—Princess Yolanda, eldest daughter of King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena, will be married tomorrow to Count Calvi di Rercolo, with civil and religious ceremonies impressive in their grandeur. The civil marriage will take place at 10:30 in the morning in the Grand hall of the Quirinal palace, with the entire Royal family, President Mussolini and the ministry and the chief officers of the senate, the chamber and the crown present.

The religious marriage will follow.

NEGRO RUNS AMUCK; IS KILLED BY POSSE

Vidalia, Ga., April 8.—Will Phillips, a negro, who ran amuck here last night, shooting two white men after he tried to kill his wife, died early today from wounds received when a posse that was pursuing him opened fire on the negro late last night.

Phillips came here from Swainsboro, armed with a shotgun, with the avowed intention of killing his wife. He bought two boxes of cartridges in addition to the supply he already had. T. J. Ford, a bailiff, was slightly wounded in attempting to disarm the negro. Phillips fired point blank at the sheriff, but the latter was close enough to grab the barrel, diverting most of the shot away from him.

Phillips then clubbed the officer with the gun.

P. H. Haskins, garage man of this place, was the only one of the possemen wounded. He drove the car in which county officers were riding.

Parasols came into general use in this country about 1820.

FOUR ARE KILLED IN AUTO WRECK

President of Garter Company One of Victims When Train Hits Car Near Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala., April 8.—Two men were instantly killed and two fatally injured as the result of a collision between an automobile and a freight train here early today.

En route to East Lake, a suburb, to take W. S. Lamkin, to his home, Grady Edwards, aged 24, drove a car belonging to Marvin Edwards in a Seaboard Air Line freight train at Thirty Second street and First avenue, north. Edwards was killed instantly. Lamkin died en route to a hospital and two other members of the party, Nugent B. Valrin, 33, of New Orleans, president of the Ivory Garter company, and John D. Harris, 26, died in hospitals.

Harris, Edwards and Lamkin were old friends, according to associates. Valrin is believed to have been an army acquaintance who renewed connections when he arrived in Birmingham Saturday morning on business. According to William J. Leblanc, district manager of the Ivory Garter company, who came to Birmingham Sunday from Atlanta to discuss advertising matters with his president, Mr. Valrin, was in the habit of calling up old friends in various towns and talking over mutual experiences.

The car was practically demolished. Valrin's body was sent to New Orleans, accompanied by Mr. Leblanc. Funeral services for the others will be held Monday afternoon in Birmingham.

The bride was pouring over a volume. "What are you reading, dearie?" "An article on how to cook goulash." "Now if you go to getting formal with it, you'll spoil it."—Louisville Courier Journal.

The accident occurred near Greenville Springs, thirty miles south of Jacksonville. Calder was a traveling salesman.

LOUIS MEYERHARDT IS DEAD IN ROME

Rome, Ga., April 8.—(Special.)—Louis P. Meyerhardt, city editor of the Rome Tribune-Herald, died suddenly this afternoon at 5 o'clock of heart disease. He was a brother of Judge Max Meyerhardt, whose death occurred just a month ago.

Mr. Meyerhardt was born in Rome in 1858. He was the son of Mrs. D. J. Meyerhardt who moved here in the early fifties.

For a number of years Mr. Meyerhardt made his home in California, being connected with several newspapers of that state. He returned to Rome to serve as its editor of the Rome Tribune-Herald about five years ago. Mr. Meyerhardt also served as city editor of the Albany Herald, at Albany, for a short time, and served in the same capacity on the Augusta Chronicle.

First Woman Deputy Clerk Is Appointed To Serve in Courts of Fulton County

Miss Lucile Miles, Fulton county's first deputy clerk, taking the oath of office. From left to right, Miss Bessie Kempton, Georgia's first woman legislator, and a warm friend of Miss Miles; Chief Judge Luther L. Rosser, of municipal court; Miss Miles, and Judge O. H. Puckett, clerk of the court.

Holding the distinction of being the first woman deputy clerk in Fulton county's courts, Miss Lucile Miles, on Monday morning will enter upon her new duties as clerk and secretary to Chief Judge L. Z. Rosser, of the municipal court.

The honor comes to Miss Miles in recognition of her efficient services since she became associated with the court. The position she takes is one of the most responsible under Judge O. H. Puckett, clerk of the court.

Miss Miles, who celebrates her twenty-first birthday today, took the oath of office Saturday in the presence of several court officials and friends, including Judge Rosser, Judge Puckett, Marshal J. M. George, Seales Aiken and Miss Bessie Kempton, Georgia's first woman legislator.

Commenting on her appointment, Miss Miles told newspapermen that women are coming to the front so rapidly in public affairs under the new order of things and that she does not feel the least bit out of place in her new position.

"There is no reason why a woman shouldn't be given the same opportunity to demonstrate her ability in public office as a man," she said. "I consider it a distinct honor to be the first to occupy such a place in this county."

Judge Puckett praised her very highly Saturday in discussing her qualifications for the clerkship. He said he regarded her as one of the most competent attaches of the entire municipal court force.

HERO OF LONGEST FIGHT WITH BARE KNUCKLES DIES

Philadelphia, April 8.—Arthur Chambers, once lightweight champion of the world and hero of the longest battle with bare knuckles in the history of the squared circle, died late last night at a local hospital. He was 75 years old, and was stricken with paralysis several weeks ago.

Chambers was widely known to followers of the professional boxing ring. When the late Marquis of Queensberry decided to formulate rules calculated to elevate the sport, he criticized Chambers and their joint efforts resulted in the rules under which boxing contests are held.

Chambers won the lightweight title from Johnny Clark, who recently died.

$40,000 FIRE LOSS IN LAWRENCEVILLE

Williams' Store Destroyed by Blaze—Mayor Sammons Thanks Atlanta for Readiness to Help.

Lawrenceville, Ga., April 8.—(Special.)—Fire that threatened for several hours to wipe out the entire business district of this city was extinguished shortly after daybreak today after it had done about $40,000 damage. G. W. Williams, large merchant, was the heaviest loser, his entire stock of goods being destroyed by the building partially burned down. He was fully protected by insurance. An adjacent office building owned by Dr. G. F. Kelly was damaged by smoke and water but the loss is not great.

For more than an hour it appeared that Lawrenceville's volunteer fire fighters were losing the battle against the flames. The city has no pumping engine and the streams of water, propelled only by ordinary force of gravity in the water mains, apparently made little headway in quenching the blaze. Sparks, carried by a brisk wind, started numbers of small fires on nearby roofs which kept men with buckets and hand extinguishers busy.

The configuration grew so threatening at 3:30 o'clock this morning that Lawrenceville officials opened negotiations with the Atlanta fire department for assistance. The Atlanta department promised to send any help needed and a company was reported to be in readiness to come when the fire was brought under control.

Mayor F. Q. Sammons said that the city, for the spirit of helpfulness shown.

"We are glad we didn't need Atlanta's help," Mr. Sammons said, "but we are glad to know that Atlanta was ready to help if we had needed her."

RAILROAD EMPLOYEE KILLS SWEETHEART

Montgomery, Ala., April 8.—Miss Elmer Hamner, aged 18, was shot and almost instantly killed here today by Joe Reynolds, 28, employee of the Western railway, following an alleged love affair in which Reynolds asserts his life was threatened by Miss Hamner.

The shooting occurred in the home of Miss Hamner here following what eye witnesses told police was a verbal combat in which Miss Hamner told Reynolds she would have nothing more to do with him.

Reynolds is married and has two children. Self defense is his plea.

REWARD OFFERED TO FIND RUMPH

Savannah, Ga., April 8.—(Special.)—Relatives returning today from Valdosta where search was inaugurated for Robert Fleming Rumph, a drug drummer, missing for nearly two weeks, announced an offer of $100 reward for information leading to the finding of the young man and his body.

They believe that foul play or unusual mental derangement is responsible for his strange disappearance. Careful probing of two suicides here in the past few days failed to connect any clue even of the unidentified man who leaped into the Savannah river and whose body has not been found—with Rumph.
